

With the increasing prevalence of diabetes in cats, more owners are discovering that their feline pets are afflicted with this very manageable health condition. If left untreated, diabetes can drastically lessen your cat's quality of life and shorten its lifespan. It is very important to see your veterinarian immediately if you suspect that your cat has diabetes.

Fortunately, diabetes can be treated and does not mean a death sentence for your beloved pet. By working with your veterinarian, your cat can continue to live a long and healthy life.